Wireless network

There are two ways to connect to the Paris 1 Wi-Fi network :

1) Eduroam Wi-Fi network

- To connect to the Eduroam network, download and install eduroam CAT on your smartphone, tablet or computer ;
- In the list of institutions, select ‘Université Paris 1 Panthéon-Sorbonne’ and complete the installation.

Once set up, this tool will allow you to automatically connect to the Eduroam network at any participating university or higher education institution, both in France and internationally.

2) univ-paris1.fr Wi-Fi network

- If you do not have Eduroam installed, you can choose ‘universite-paris1’ ;
- Enter your Paris 1 login and password.

Antidote

Some SCD library computers are equipped with a spell-checking software that works in both English and French : Antidote.

Antidote is designed for everyone: from those who want to improve their writing, to individuals with dyslexia, and especially for users whose first language is not French. It's easy to use : just open your word processor and type your text. Then, click on the 'Antidote' menu in the top right corner, followed by the 'Corrector' option.

Antidote offers three main tools to help correct and enhance your text: the Language section, which checks for French grammar and conjugation errors ; the Typography section, which focuses on punctuation mistakes ; and the Style section, which helps improve the overall quality of your writing.

Once you select a menu, the errors will appear in the right-hand pane along with suggested corrections. Click on any error in your text to view a tooltip with the correction and an explanation. To apply the correction, simply click 'Correct'. The Style menu helps you identify repetitive phrases, redundant expressions, and vocabulary, making your text more readable and inclusive. For example, in the Repetition menu, Antidote will highlight terms you've used multiple times. By selecting a term, you'll see a 'Synonym' option that provides alternative words to diversify your vocabulary and improve your writing.
